

Sebastian Phillip Foye

January 8, 2010 - December 19, 2020

Sebastian was born in High Point, North Carolina and moved with his family to Tucson in 2014. He attended local schools and was well-regarded by his teachers and was good friends with his classmates. He also participated at Rita Ranch Martial Arts as a Karate student and he loved being part of that experience.

Sebastian is survived by his mother, Rachel Babcock, grandparents Janet and Richard Stewart, and Nancy Foye, and several aunts, uncles, and cousins.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Sebastian's memory may be made to Rita Ranch Martial Arts.

Comments

“ Eleanor sent a virtual gift in memory of Sebastian Phillip Foye

Eleanor - November 22 at 12:15 PM

“ He was my friend. He always asked who my little sister was, and cheered me up when i was sad. He was always happy and loving. I miss him every day. I can't believe its already been 11 months and 4 days. It feels like it was yesterday, it hurts so much.
-Eleanor

Eleanor - November 22 at 12:13 PM

“ Sebastian was a great friend. He was always had a huge smile on his face. He was one of my dearest friends. When he transferred to a new school I was very sad. But I still could know how he was doing cause he went to my nieces school. Sebastian was great he would always cheer people up. When I was crying because I didn't want my teacher to leave the school he cheered me up. When I was sad he made me happy. I give my prayers for Sebastian.

Raquel Elrod - January 20 at 03:14 PM

“ There’s a spiritual concept that exists that we come back here to re-live our lives with our loved ones, that we see them again down here again, in different form, not up there forever ... but in another lifetime. A premise written about in his discovery by Ivy League graduated and retired medical director, Dr Brian Weiss, which he held back for years to obviously not sound crazy . He was featured on Oprah and his book “Many Lives, Many Masters” is a page turner. I would only mention any of this in the wish of expedient healing to his mother today. And, of course, all who loved him dearly. I know reading that book (and I’m no avid book reader) is one you can’t put down, stunned me and made me think of life and death differently. This kid grabbed my heart from a thousand miles away;. As the adage goes, “a picture says a 1,000 words.” Perhaps much of him reminding me of my own son, close in age and now, after days of my own stunned grieving, discovered even in the same time of year, born. Only a few pics it took to say enough to tell you Sebastian was a tremendous rare light in this world. I even love his name for him. Inexpicably, I grieved this child too, as if he were a kid down the street or a sons friend from school. Holiday tunes, prior to Christmas, felt numb to me thinking of him, as I’d walk through a grocery store, not helping myself but to think of what happened and what could have been. This story and this child - Sebastian’s ebullient smile was on my mind even on Christmas Day and clearly, after. As a single mom, with one son also, working 3 jobs, I felt compelled to send what I could in helping to participate in ensuring a wonderful, appreciated celebration of his life. Today felt different. Today was the first day I could smile, from my heart and soul in remembering him , and feel joy, in the honor of his birthday, thinking of his smile, the Mother’s Day card he left his mom, and the mark he left on the world. From one mom to another, I wish you love, healing and the gift of joy found again, Rachel. And a happy birthday bash to Bash up there - til you’re in each other’s arms again down here. Til then - it’s the soul that binds.

Anna Povetska - January 08 at 09:54 PM

“ Sebastian, Grandma Nancy, and your aunties love you.

Lauren Mitchell - December 28, 2020 at 04:44 PM

“ deepest condolences from Griffin's Trauma Scene Cleanup, LLC

Colt Griffin - December 28, 2020 at 03:53 PM

“ I never met Sebastian or his fam, but I know all too easily he was much like my son, or could have been one of my son's friends. Sebastian had that loving glow that could never be forgotten. It emanates, it's ebullient. That smile will shine on in my heart forever. May his mom live knowing he loved her so much. And still does.

Anna Povetska - December 28, 2020 at 01:47 AM

“ Kimberly Hahn-Nasser lit a candle in memory of Sebastian Phillip Foye

Kimberly Hahn-Nasser - December 26, 2020 at 09:04 PM

“ I had the pleasure of spending a couple of summers with Sebastian. There were frequent pool parties. There were cannonball contests and every now and then, we ate one two many hotdogs. Sebastian was a golden light in a sea of average humans. He was the most caring little boy in the world. He literally wouldn't hurt a fly or any nagging bug. Yep, me! Sebastian had an incredibly beautiful outlook on life. He had a wonderful singing voice and could bust a move at any given moment. He viewed the world through rose colored glasses. Such a kind, sweet child. Every time I see a Hawaii tree, I think of his beautiful smile and positive outlook on all that life had to offer such a promising soul. May you rest sweet, little love.

Kimberly Hahn-Nasser - December 26, 2020 at 09:00 PM

“ I will never forget that sweet, sweet face and especially that smile I would see every day coming down my street on his bike. The friendliest face around; he never hesitated to say hi. I will miss his kindness to others, my daughter and to the animals he always came to say hi to. Bagel will miss him dearly too.

erin mcgee - December 26, 2020 at 05:22 PM

“ I was neighbors with Sebastian for 3 years. I remember the first time meeting him was at the swimming pool & he shared his lemon oreo cookies, from that moment on he was mine & my two sons buddy. He had the biggest smile that brightened any room he was in. He was so polite. He would come help bake cookies and always want to take some home to his mom who he loved soooo much. I could go on and on. We love & miss you Sebastian. Look after mom from above & keep riding that bike buddy
Tammy Tylar & Mikel

Tammy - December 24, 2020 at 02:35 PM